aster to prospectors on the ill-flated Edmonton trail. At least fifty boats, they say, have capsized on Great Slave lake since last summer. Many prospectors were drowned.

P. Johnson, a mining engineer of Edmonton, who spent several weeks at McDames creek this winter, says Vaientine Wendler of New York, a Bavarian, and one of a party of Philadelphians, was found dead in his cabin twelve miles from McDames.

The body of James Mowat, a miner, who started from Telegraph creek for Attin, with his supplies on a hand sted, was found on the top of Egnets summit, fifty miles from Telegraph, about the end of March. He was suffering from scurvy when he started, and it is supposed he succumbed to it. His body was placed on a sled and brought back to Telegraph, whece there are twelve cases of scurvy in the hospital.

Last summer, while crossing Toad river, on the Edmonton horse trail, one man was drowned. Another was lost subsequently in the Cranberry rapids, just above Mud river. Another was drowned at Simpson, at the mouth of the Liard, by slipping off a scow. A fourth, a Philadelphian, was also reported drowned on the same river. None of the names could be obtained. A similar report was in circulation in regard to Captain Mason, who was said to have been least on Nelson river. Charles Heimet, a Brooklyn hotel man, has been laid up with frozen feet at Laketon.

Entire Party Perished.

Entire Party Perished.

A party of ten or twelve young men, among whom were Hutton and Paine of Vancouver, Dun Taylor and Leighton, are thought to have perished on Hay mountain in December. They started out in the wake of another party, who were going to try and reach the upper Liard post. The first party came out 100 miles from their destination, but the second party has not been heard of. They were lightly provided with provisions. They lost the trail of the first party in a blinding snow storm.

The skeleton of Neely of Sault Ste Marie was found in the Grand Canyon of the Liard in December by two Minnesota men. A note was in his hand saying that a comrade, Graham by name, had deserted him.

There are a number of cases of scurvy at Mud river, Dease and McDame. Starvation is threatened unless relief arrives. Numbers are suffering from frozen limbs, and it is feared that there will be a big death roll.

All of the transportation companies, the Hudson Bay company and the gold commissioner at Telegraph are providing relief.

The smelter employees say the eighthour law, which goes into effect June 15, must be observed, and they demand the same wages for eight hours as have been paid for ten hours. Notice was posted today at all the smelters of the American Smelting & Refining company and also at the works of the Philadelphia Smelting & Refining company of an increase in wages of 10 per cent, restoring the rate that was paid previous to the panic of 1893. The wages, however, will be considerably less for ten or twelve hours, and it is possible that a general strike of smelter employees in Colorado, numbering over 10,000, will take place when the eighthour law becomes effective.

WORLD FAMOUS TONIC

"When we speak of a crock inipping a diamond stud, we use the word advisedly," said a central station detective. "It's not a case of idle slang. In fact, nearly all the words used in a slang way by thieves and police officers come nearer to expressing the exact idea of what we mean to illustrate than most people think. This way, but there have the phrase stile a famond. Now, that's all right in its way, but there has a hundred or more ways in which diamonds may be stolen, so it gives us no clew as to the particular method of operation. But when we are told that some crock has nipped a spark, we know exactly how he did it, and have a fair sort of lead to work on.

"To inly a spark means to cut off a diamond from a man's ahirt-front. The phrase originated in the style of the instrument used by the thief. Diamonds lost in this way are not unscrewed or pulied out from a shirt-front, as some people believe. The diamond nipper carries a small instrument made like a pair of nippers. It can be carried between the fingers and kept concealed in that way and has a little cup into which the diamond falls when cut from the gold mounting. When the alpres sees a stone that pleases his fancy, he simply slips his little instrument to the front, jostless and shoves past his victim, perhaps curses him for treading on his toes, and, having distracted his attention, slips one hand close to his bosom. A simple move, a pressure of the finger, the sharp laws clutch the shank of the sharp laws clutch the shank of the sharp laws clutch the shank of the sharp laws clutch the nipper is gone. Some of the Annoyances She Encounters at Picture Exhibitions.

(New York Commercial Advertiser.) As a rule, the young woman w takes tickets at the picture exhibition is an art student herself. The other girls trying to earn money envy her, and think she has a "soft thing." It is apparently easy enough to be the ticket taker at a picture show. All there is to do, apparently, is to sit in a room full of pictures, take people's tickets as they come in and sell catalogues.

"You would be surprised to see how much work it is," said a girl who takes tickets at one of the big exhibitions. "You have to keep your eyes open all the time, for there are a large number of people who try to run past without tickets. I have to go after people a dozen times a day, calling "Ticket, picase," and they turn on me with an indignant stare. Most of them then go and buy tickets. But one well-dressed women the other day took up her lorgnetic, looked over me from head to foot, and said, in an icy tone: "Ticket! I have no ticket!" and proceeded calmly on her way. I ran after her again.

"Madame," I said, 'I shall have to trouble you for a ticket!

"I have already told you I had none, she said.

"I am afraid you will have to get one," said I. I was beginning to be afraid I should have to get a bouncer to put her out, for I was determined she should not go in without paying. That is what I'm here for, and I am conscientious. Well, at last she flounced out to the ticket office, bought her ticket and put it down on my desk,
